Domingos Paesa a Portuguese traveler visited Hampi 500 years back wrote "...People cross to this place by boats which are round like baskets. Inside they are made of cane, and outside are covered with leather; they are able to carry fifteen or twenty persons, and even horses and oxen can cross in them if necessary, but for the most part these animals swim across.

FROM FERRY TO BRIDGE: Plans for a bridge across the Delaware River between southeastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey date back to at least the late 1700s, when continuous ferry service began between the industrial port city of Chester and the sleepy waterfront town of Bridgeport. In 1936, the ferry became part of the national highway system when the US 322 designation was carried from ...
